

case study suri shoes

The Suri Group has been engaged in the leather products sector for the last five decades. Originally the group manufactured Industrial Leather, saddlery, harness and bicycle saddles. Today they are vendors to footwear retailers globally, buying branded and unbranded footwear products from fashion shoes to safety boots. From a humble beginning with a work force of five, today the group has the support of 1150 dedicated and skilled workers and are still growing.

industry and size

Leather shoes, 1150 employees worldwide.

challenge

To create a sales floor and showroom that reflects the business, whilst being fit for purpose.

“The acs Team were highly professional and skilled when transforming our premises. Their experience and technical ability was vital to achieve our new showroom, offices and boardroom facilities which was completely bespoke for our business requirements.”

Lindsey Robertson,
Office Manager

solution

Space planning possible layouts for the furniture to accommodate a sales floor and a meeting/showroom. acs created bespoke units and recommended white durable furniture.

The acs design team worked on various options to accommodate the required staff and display facilities. The client required bespoke units to display their shoes and glazed partitioning that reflected the company's quality whilst offering a contemporary look and feel.
